

Bachelors of Technology in Homeland Security

The Homeland Security degree prepares students for positions in public and private sectors to be able to plan for and defend against terrorism. The program is an extension of the highly successful Associates in Applied Science in Criminal Justice degree, as well as the Bachelors of Technology in Criminal Investigation and the Bachelors of Technology in Criminal Justice: Law Enforcement Leadership, and other four-year degrees offered at SUNY Canton. Options for employment include availabilities in both front-line operations and behind the scenes planning.

Bachelors of Technology in Criminal Investigation

The Criminal Investigation degree is unique since it is a Bachelors of Technology, as opposed to a Bachelor of Science or Bachelor of Arts. The B. Tech. degree allows the students the option of taking more courses within their discipline and having a hands-on technical component to classes. The upper level JUST courses are offered in a "total immersion" fashion with a block class format. During the 8th and final semester of college the CI students have the option of participating in a 600-hour internship or completing 5 upper division JUST courses.

Students within the major become accomplished through coursework in investigative photography techniques, interview skills, latent print processing, evidence packaging, crime scene investigation techniques, and managing and successfully completing a mock homicide investigation.
